CAMBRIDGE, May 28.

Wednesday last afforded the Inhabitants of this place a little electioneering amusement. The members of the University met at the Senate house, and re-elected the man who has totally apostatized from the sentiments he professed when he was first elected, and who, we doubt not, will in a short time, be considered, by the people at large, as the greatest curse the Almighty ever permitted to plague a nation. His colleague, Lord Euston, who has supported his measures, and whose guilt is aggravated, when we consider the contrast which the conduct of his noble Father, the Duke of Grafton, presents to his view, was likewise re-elected. Neither Mr. Pitt nor Lord Euston made any speech on the occasion. A boy, who was asked the reason, said well enough, "they did not intend opening their mouths till dinner time."

The University of Cambridge was once famed for its Whig Principles. It has formerly produced famous Patriots, and has made noble stands against tyranny. But alas! How is the gold become dim—the most fine gold changed!

While the farce was carrying on at the Senate-house by Mr. Pitt in person; a still greater farce was carrying on at the Town-Hall by his faithful manager of this Borough—our present Mayor, Mr. Mortlock. There were about fifty persons present, commonly called Freemen, that is, men who are generally created by the Mayor, and who are Slaves to his will and pleasure. There were, however, three or four open countenances, which we thought betrayed a consciousness of the disgraceful scene going forward—A few men, appointed in an arbitrary manner by an individual well paid by Government, choosing two representatives for a populous town, in which a large majority of the inhabitants are not suffered to vote. The two late members, Maj. Gen. Manners and Col. Finch were re elected: They muttered a few words, (which scarce half a dozen people could hear) expressive of their regard for the welfare of the country, by which, judging by their past conduct, they mean, that as their trade is War, they will do all in their power to support the Minister in carrying on that war, in which we have been so long and so gloriously engaged!

The elections were succeeded, as usual, by feasting and carousing, and plenty of beer was distributed out of doors. The behaviour of the populace was however tolerably peaceable, and no other accident took place than a little scratching and fighting. We wish we could say as much for the Gentlemen Freemen in the Town-Hall, who followed up their venality with drunkenness and disorder, and who did not part without blows. The town however in general was not disturbed on the occasion.

To the Electors of Westminster.

GENTLEMEN,

IT is only in times like the present, when attempts are flagitiously made to murder innocent men, that the progress of a candidate can possibly be, from the Hustings to Newgate, and from Newgate back to the Hustings. The circumstance declares the times; for any man who could reasonably be even suspected of deserving what I have suffered, would be abandoned by the whole human race.

But you must be well aware, that if I had never known, or knowing, had not loved the free Constitution of my country, I should not have been voted a traitor by the usurping proprietors of boroughs; who, under an insidious pretence of attachment; not to Kingship, which we acklowledge—but to Monarchy, which we abhor,—are endeavouring to undermine (it is not the place for me here to say how far they have undermined) the lawful government of King, Lords, and Commons; and to substitute a tyranny of their own, under (the most odious of all forms) a temporary, elective dictator, dependant only upon their own corrupt and prostituted votes.

In the pursuit of their plan and for the establishment of their power, they are endeavoring to seat themselves on the same throne, by the side of the sovereign; by perverting those laws of treason, which were exclusively designed to protect the person of the king, and his share of the government—by perverting them to protect equally the share which themselves have usurped.

If they can succeed in this, their next step is a short one: they will trample on him. And whenever the crown shall hereafter be awakened, and, too late, perhaps, compelled to struggle with these usurpers, the most loyal adherents of royalty will be destroyed as traitors against their new majesties; the king will have no means left to protect his most faithful subjects; and the Crown may find itself without a defender.

This attempt of theirs is the great master-treason against the Crown, the Nobility, and the whole Commons of the Realm.

In order the more efficaciously to resist these traitors to us all, these un-acquitted felons, or to lay down my life usefully to the public in opposition to their plunder and tyranny; I again offer myself to represent you in the ensuing Parliament.

If the purpose of your election were to choose a master or promote a minister, or to bestow any portion of power or emolument on the object of your choice, I should acknowledge myself to be the last person who ought to present himself to your notice. But if your purpose be to appoint a servant, whose duty it is to pursue your interest, not his own; to maintain your rights, not to obtain an office for himself; to follow singly your will independently of all parties and all other connexions; I may then with confidence offer myself, and say, that, in me you shall, if you please, find

A faithful Servant,
JOHN HORNE TOOKE.

LONDON, May 27.

If we may judge from the experience of the present war, there is no circumstance so speedily presages the ruin of a country as to be taken under the protection of Great Britain. Such is the mortifying situation to which our royal allies are reduced, that it calls even the pity of French republicans,

"Albeit unused to the melting mood."

Remarkable instance of Strength of Memory.

When the Senate of Venice gave notice to the count de Provence (Louis XVIII.) to remove from the Venetian territories, he replied—"I will go, and I do not forget that I am King of France."

A packet, containing secret dispatches for the duke of Brunswick, on the subject of a recent alliance, has lately been intercepted by a Jersey cruizer: in consequence of which act of hostility, a separate treaty is expected very shortly to take place between certain HIGH contracting parties.

ARMY OF THE SAMBRE AND THE MEUSE.

Extract of a letter from General Jourdan, commander-in chief of the army of the Sambre and the Meuse, to the Executive Directory.

"Head Quarters, at Raument,
16th Prairial (June 4.)

"Citizen Directors,

"I HAD the honor to inform you, by my letter of the 4th current, that the enemy had broken the armistice, and that hostilities would recommence on the 12th (May 31.) I have now to give you an account of the first movement of the army.

"On the 12th, the corps which was in the Hundsdruck took a position, partly on the Nahe, and partly in the rear of Sohnerwald. General Marceau, who was encamped at Berkenfeld, attacked the enemy's advanced posts, which were on the right bank of the Nahe, and which might have obstructed our communications. He beat them in, and established his light troops, in their situation. General Poncet had proceeded to the Kirn, and carried all the posts. General Championet attacked the cantonment of Nidder-Diebach, which the enemy ought not to have occupied, conformably to the conditions of the armistice: this cantonment was forced. The enemy encamped, in considerable force, on several points, dispatched on the 13th (June 1) some light troops to attack the advanced posts of General Marceau, but they did not succeed in forcing them.

"The first operation of the division of the army destined to act on the right bank of the Rhine, under the command of General Kleber, has been most brilliant. This General set out on the 12th (May 31) on his march towards the Sieg; and on the following day (June 1) attacked the enemy, and routed them completely. I enclose you his report, by which you will see, undoubtedly not without pleasure, that the excellent dispositions of this General were executed with zeal and intelligence by the Generals under his command, and with the utmost courage by the troops. You will also find enclosed a copy of his report of the 15th (June 3) which will apprise you of his dispositions to force the enemy to abandon their positions at Ukareth, and you will be pleased at seeing that he attained his aim by the dexterity of his manœuvres, and has by these means spared the blood of the defenders of the country. I am informed, that this General proceeded this day towards Altenkirchen, where the enemy, it would appear, mean to make a stand. I hope that he will have successes there equal to those on the Sieg. The movement of General Kleber has disquieted the enemy's army on the right bank of the Rhine. The camp of Baumholder, and all the troops which were on the Nahe, from its source to Kirn, retreated during last night.

(Signed) JOURDAN."

The General of Division, Kleber, commanding the left wing of the army of the Sambre and Meuse, to the commander in chief, Jourdan.

"Head Quarters at Siegberg,
16th Prairial (June 4.)

"I gave you an account, my dear comrade, in my last, that on the 12th (May 31) the army under my command had marched to the position between Bortz and the Chateau of Bensberg, making a distance of seven great leagues. On the same day General Lefebvre's advanced posts had two skirmishes, one in the environs of Bensberg, the other on the archer, between Trofsdorff and Omar—a few of our men were wounded.

"On the 13th (June 1) at four in the morning, the army proceeded in two columns. The advanced guard, commanded by General Lefebvre, had orders to force the passage of the Acher in front of Trofsdorff, at Ohmar, and at Lonarth; to carry Seigberg, and immediately after to proceed up the right bank of the Seig, and post itself near Happenchofs, so as to be enabled, on the following day, to cross the Seig, above Blakenburg, to attack in the rear the position of Ukareth, in case the enemy should maintain themselves there. The second division, commanded by General Colaud, had orders to force the passage of the Sieg on the two points of Meindorff and Menden, to proceed up the left bank of that river, and to post itself before Bursdoff. The enemy occupied both the Acher and the Sieg, where they were strongly entrenched. About nine o'clock in the morning, the two divisions, being at the points agreed on, commenced the attack with impetuosity, forced the passages, and drove the enemy every where from their entrenchments. A part of General Lefebvre's advanced guard charged the enemy to the very gates of Siegberg, and immediately after took possession of the city, and of the bridge on the Sieg, although defended by artillery.

"The second division, commanded by General Colaud, divided the corps which defended the Sieg, and drove a part of those troops towards the Rhine—but as there was a warm canonade on the side of Siegberg, the General proceeded, conformably to his orders, from Hute towards Bursdorff, for the purpose of supporting the advanced guard of General Lefebvre. He contented himself with leaving two battalions to watch the motions of the small body of the enemy he left in the rear, and which did not delay to retreat, by the route of the Rhine, towards Mentz.—As soon as I was certain that General Colaud's division was advancing full speed. I ordered General Lefebvre's cavalry, commanded by General Hautpole, to croſs the Sieg as ſecretly as poſſible, for the purpoſe of purſuing the enemy. To this cavalry, that of General Colaud's diviſion, at the head of which were the Adjutant-Generals Ney and Ormancey, was inſtantly united. They advanced, and every where the Auſtrian cavalry, although far ſuperior in number, yielded the ground. It was now that the firſt regiment of Chaſſeurs, commanded by the chief of ſquadron, Richepanſe, came up with a part of them oppoſite Heneff; and, having reached this village, he ordered his troops to charge, and made a horrible carnage. This commander diſplayed on the occaſion proofs of the utmoſt coolneſs in the midſt of dangers, and of an intrepid boldneſs. In purſuing the cavalry, he fell on a poſt of infantry, when he made his chaſſeurs halt, ordered a hedge-fire to be kept up; and, in chaſing the enemy, contrived alſo to overcome the obſtacle which was thrown in the way of his purſuit. At length the Auſtrians, every where defeated, retreated with precipitation, and threw themſelves into the formidable poſt of Alkareth. A forced march and four hours fighting, would not admit of any farther purſuit, and more particularly as this poſt, impregnable in front, required great circuits to turn it in its flanks. Thus the infantry of General Lefebvre's advanced guard continued its march towards the right bank of the Sieg, paſſed the night in the poſt of Happenſchoſs, and General Colauds diviſion on the heights before Baſdorff.—It unqueſtionably does not belong to me, to beſtow praiſes on theſe Generals, my fellow labourers; but it would be difficult for me not to expreſs the ſatisfaction I felt at ſeeing the zeal and activity of each of them, the unity of the operations with which they were charged, and the ardour which prevailed in their reſpective columns, even in the midſt of action.—The officers of the ſtaff equally diſtinguiſhed themſelves. They every where furniſhed an example to the troops. Citizen Viron, ſecond to Adjutant-General Cayla, with a very ſmall force, made the whole poſt of Ohmar priſoners.

"Citizen Bevalet, ſecond to Adjutant General Ney, by a charge purpoſely executed, protected the croſſing of the Sieg, effected by General Lorge at Menden. His hat was ſhot through in ſeveral places. Beurmann, my aid-de-camp, received a Sabre wound on the wriſt, but killed the ſoldier from whom he received it. Auguſte Demas, another of my aids-de camp, had his horſe wounded. The light-artillery was managed in the uſual way, with boldneſs and intelligence; its batteries, conſtantly well directed, and ſerved with the utmoſt celerity, did a great deal of miſchief to the enemy. The names of all the officers and ſoldiers who diſtinguiſhed themſelves on this day not yet being known to me, I ſhall hereafter tranſmit them to General Lenouf, by the chief of my ſtaff.

"The loſs of the enemy may be eſtimated at 2,400 men at leaſt, upwards of a 1000 of whom are priſoners. Among the latter are a Major, and ſeveral other officers. They will remove in the courſe of the day to Bonn.

"Among our wounded are two captains of the firſt regiment of Chaſſeurs, of the moſt diſtinguiſhed courage; theſe are citizens Matthieu and Huduy—the firſt received fourteen Sabre wounds, ſeveral of them mortal; the lower arm of the ſecond was carried away by a ball

(Signed) "KLEBER."

Extract of a Letter from the General of Diviſion, Kleber, to the Commander in Chief, Jourdan.

"I gave you an account, my dear comrade, in my report of yeſterday, that, after the battle of the Sieg, the enemy retreated to their camp of Alkareth, and that the diviſion commanded by Gen. Lefebvre paſſed the night on the right of the Sieg, oppoſite Hoppenſchoſs, and that commanded by Gen. Colaud on the heights of Heneff. Thus, with a view to attack the enemy in flank and rear, Gen. Lefebvre received orders to croſs the Sieg above Blankenberg, and Gen. Colaud to proceed towards Jungrath, to reach from thence the highway by a croſs march, leaving, however, a few battalions at Wurth, and a few poſts of infantry and cavalry blended along the ravine to the heights of that village. Theſe movements, although extremely difficult, on account of the very bad ſtate of the roads, were perfectly well executed. At four in the afternoon the columns were ſtationed almoſt at the ſame time by the right and left, on the heights behind Alkareth; and certainly, if the enemy had determined to continue in their poſt, not one of them would have eſcaped; but, being apprized of our movements by their huſſars, they ſoon became acquainted with our manœuvres, and retreated to Altenkirchen, contenting themſelves with leaving, on the heights behind Alkareth, two or three ſquadrons to protect their retreat. The two diviſions accordingly eſtabliſhed themſelves, at three quarters of a league from Alkareth, in a very advantageous poſition. Since their departure from the Wipper, the troops have done nothing but march and fight.

(Signed) "KLEBER."

BRUSSELLS, (18 Prarial,) June 6.

Since hoſtilities re commenced on the right bank, and the Auſtrians have been obliged to retreat, a flying bridge has been eſtabliſhed oppoſite to Cologne, by the means of which a communication is opened with the right bank of the Rhine. Wounded Frenchmen and others are every moment brought into the hoſpitals of this town.

A requiſition is to be made along the left bank of the Rhine from Cologne to Coblentz, of a great number of pioneers, deſtined to the works carrying on at the mouth of the Moſelle, as well as on both ſides of Coblentz.

PARIS, June 9.

The Louis d'or got down yeſterday to 12,000 and 10,000 livres in aſſignats; the mandats roſe in the ſame proportion; and the price of proviſions fluctuated in the moſt alarming manner. The whole of the ſame day, a great ferment was obſerved every where in this metropolis, owing to the true or ſuppoſed project of transferring the ſeat of government to Fontainbleau. Detachments of horſe which at ten o'clock at night took poſt at the bridge of Notre Dame, prevented any aſſemblages forming on the key. Small groupes began to be attached at the entrance of the ſtreet de la Verrerie, on the keys of La Greve and Gefores. But the ſteady conduct of the commander in chief, the arreſt of ſome individuals who obſtinately refuſed to withdraw, and the horſe galloping about the place ſoon diſperſed the groupes. The fugitives rallied on the bridge Auchange, exclaiming—"Down with the Chouans and the ſlaves;" and a ſmall groupe collected oppoſite to the Great Chatelet, endeavoured to fraternize with the Dragoons, and addreſſed them in the following terms—"We are good republicans, brethren; but we are ſtarving—we want bread, and claim the rights of the people—Dear brethren! we know if you were not under arms, you would be Terroriſts like ourſelves." But all theſe fine phraſes did not prevent the troops from ſcouring the bridges and key.

The feſtival of victory has been celebrated with more or leſs pomp in all the departments of the republic, in the department of Doubs, two girls, repreſenting the goddeſſes of victory and France were carried about in a triumphal car, attended by all the members of the conſtituted authorities, who were decorated with the ſymbols of their dignity. When the ceremony was over, General Dufour gave an elegant ſupper, during which the two goddeſſes are ſaid to have too much humaniſed themſelves, under reiterated exclamations of "Long live the Sans culottes—Long live the mountaineers."

June 10.

Yeſterday all remained quiet here, owing to the precautions taken by the armed force to prevent all ſort of aſſemblages. But it ought alſo to be confeſſed, that the ſucceſſes of our armies have much contributed to check the ſeditious. The riſe of the mandats which before were generally refuſed, is owing to the ſame cauſe.

Gen. Kleber, in a proclamation addreſſed to the inhabitants of the right banks of the Rhine, wherein he informed them of the intended march of the French troops through their country, orders them not to quit their houſes, and not to fly to the enemy, on pain of their eſtates being given up to fire and plunder.

June 11.

The rain which fell yeſterday morning would, it ſeemed, have prevented all aſſemblages and groupes, but the various detachments of horſe, which occupied all the bridges, and every avenue leading to the directory and the legiſlative body, evinced that government did not ſhare in the ſecurity of the citizens. All was ſtill and quiet till eight o'clock in the evening, when ſome citizens aſſembled at the bridge Notre Dame, were deſired by the centries to withdraw. They replied with threatenings and inſults; and outcries of "down with the Chouans and the Tyrants," reſounding every where. The ſentries being forced from their poſts, detachments of horſe advanced from ſeveral quarters, and reſtored tranquility. One dragoon, who refuſed to draw his ſword againſt what he called the people, was arreſted by order of the commanding general. Attempts continue to be made to miſlead the public opinion; and the claſs of working people eagerly ſeize on every report of intended murders of the patriots, and of the projected invaſion of the directory and the two councils. Rumour ſays, that the firſt courier who was diſpatched by our generals on the Rhine with the account of the advantages obtained by them over the Auſtrians, has been aſſaſſinated by thoſe who wiſhed to ſtir up new commotions in Paris. It was this cauſe which delayed the news of thoſe advantages reaching the capital. All commotions ſeem now to be appeaſed; but we ſtill entertain much fear, that more important diſturbances are plotted in the dark.

LONDON, June 17.

It was laſt night reported, (on what authority we do not learn, that the Auſtrian army having retreated to the river Lahn, received there very conſiderable reinforcements, with which they, in their turn, attacked General Kleber, and ſucceeded in completely routing his forces, having killed ſeveral thouſand men, and taken 17 pieces of cannon. Our readers will, of courſe, conſider this merely as an unauthenticated rumour.

The following is given, in the laſt Paris papers as the contents of a letter from Frankfort, of May 20th:—

"The Auſtrians have formed an inundation, of ſeveral leagues in extent, before Manheim. The cauſeways which lead from Spires, Deux-Ponts, and Worms, are the only ones which are not covered with water: it is difficult to conceive any thing more ſtupid; for, in caſe of a retreat, there will be a dreadful confuſion, a complete diſorder; the men muſt throw down their arms, or be drowned.

"We muſt believe that the Auſtrian Generals are not very ſtrongly perſuaded that they will ſucceed, ſince the whole baggage of the army has been ſent to the rear. It is almoſt the general opinion here, that the Auſtrians will be forced, after the loſs of the firſt battle, to retreat to Bohemia: the inhabitants have, in conſequence, through fear of being pillaged by the retreating army, provided themſelves with muſkets for their own defence.

"It is impoſſible to deſcribe the diſcouragement which prevails among the Auſtrian troops. When the three battalions of Walloon grenadiers received orders to march from this place, on the 14th inſtant, to Mentz, death and deſpair were painted on the countenances of all the officers, the ſoldiers could with difficulty be aſſembled; the officers were obliged to hunt after them in the houſes where they were quartered; many of them threw themſelves on the ground, refuſing to march, and declaring that they would rather be killed on the ſpot, than go to be butchered. The men's mind were ſo much irritated, that the officers durſt not have recourſe to rigorous meaſures; and it was only by dint of ſolicitation and treaty, that they at length prevailed on them to march."

Four French ſhips of the line, with two frigates, have taken nineteen Engliſh veſſels laden with wine, from Madeira, for the uſe of the army in the Weſt Indies. This will be ſeverely felt by the ſick, as there is at preſent but little wine in the Weſt-Indies. As it was within the Tropic that theſe veſſels were taken, it may be concluded that the French ſquadron was bound to the Weſt-Indies.

The French frigate La Tribune, is taken by the Unicorn frigate, and ſent into Cork, where ſhe arrived on the 12th inſt.

Two French national brigs, one of 14 guns and the other of 10, are taken by Sir E. Pellew's ſquadron, and ſent into Falmouth. They are very faſt ſailing veſſels, and copper-bottomed.

The Thames French Frigate, taken by the Santa Margaretta frigate, is arrived at Cork.

The Baron de Stael, the Swediſh Ambaſſador in France, has publicly notified that all apprehenſions of a rupture between Sweden and Ruſſia are at an end.

An account which originated in an evening paper of Wedneſday, and appeared in moſt of the morning papers of yeſterday, of the capture of a French 54 gun ſhip by Sir Edward Pellew's ſquadron, appears to be entirely void of foundation.

The Unicorn and Santa Margaretta frigates have taken a large Dutch ſhip of about 400 tons, from Surinam for Amſterdam, with ſugar, coffee, cotton, &c. and ſent her for Cork, where ſhe is arrived.

The Fury ſloop of war, Captain Evans, has taken two Dutch ſhips worth 35,000l. and ſent them into Barbadoes.

A large Daniſh ſhip, and the Sophia, captain Gibbs, (an American,) both from Bordeaux for Altona, with wines, are taken by Sir J. B. Warren's ſquadron, and ſent into Falmouth.

The treaty with the King of Sardinia has been ratified. The ratification was announced to the Council of five hundred in the ſitting of June 10.

All the Swiſs Cantons have formally recognized the French Republic.

As to the interior of the Republic, the news of the Republican triumphs and ſucceſſes ſeems not to have produced the effect that might be expected. The capital is agitated by commotions, which alarm the government and harraſs the troops, and even ramify into the very Legiſlative Body. The conflict which took place in the Council of five hundred on the 9th inſtant, between Tallien, on the part of the Terroriſts, and Thibaudeau on that of the Moderates, has in ſome meaſure elucidated the myſtery which veils the ſecrets of the different factions. The Directory, placed between the two factions, and compoſed of members of each party, is ſeemingly ſpared by both. It is to this equipoiſe or reacting force perhaps, that may be attributed the extreme ſlowneſs of the proceedings againſt the conſpirators lately taken up.

The Reſolution, Stennerſon, from Sicily to Belfaſt, is taken and carried into Algiers.

A council was held yeſterday on the ſubject of the unhappy difference which ſubſiſts between the Prince and Princeſs of Wales.—Earls Cholmondeley and Moira attended. It is hoped that the efforts of theſe two Noble Lords, who have moſt zealouſly exerted themſelves to reſtore harmony to the diſtracted houſehold of the Prince, will be finally ſucceſsful.

The Queen alſo had a conference on this important ſubject, at which Lady Jerſey aſſiſted.

The Princeſs of Wales, it is ſaid, inſiſts upon the appointment of all the female part of her houſehold, as a preliminary that muſt be ratified, previouſly to any further negociation.

The diſaſters of the Auſtrian army on the Rhine ward the univerſal topics yeſterday in the Court Circles. Government have not, however, any thing official, nor have any of the Foreign Miniſters.

By a veſſel arrived at Portſmouth, from Teneriffe, which Iſland ſhe left the 15th of laſt month, we have intelligence, that the Dutch fleet ſtill lay there, not nearly refitted for ſea. We have likewiſe the more important intelligence, that our own Eaſt-India fleet, which ſailed in the laſt diviſion, had paſſed Teneriffe in ſafety about 14 days before the arrival of the Dutch. It is therefore conſidered as certain, that the account of the former French papers, of the capture of eleven of our Eaſt-Indiamen, is totally void of foundation.

A letter dated Port Oratara, Teneriffe, May 13, (received the 14th of June, by the Ocean, arrived at Portſmouth,) ſays:—"The Dutch fleet are ſtill at Grand Canary, and in a very miſerable condition. It is ſaid they have a peſtilence amongſt them, that carries them off very faſt, and are upon the ſhort allowance of a pound of pork per man a week."

The Jaſon, Dutch frigate, which was bro't into Greenock by her crew, has been formally ſurrendered up in the name of the Stadtholder; the ſeamen have petitioned to ſerve in the Britiſh navy.

The enemy are collecting conſiderable flotillas of flat bottomed and gun boats, &c. at Oſtend, Dunkirk, and Fluſhing.

Died, lately on his paſſage from the Weſt-Indies, ſir John Laforey, Bart. Vice-Admiral of the Red.

The Royaliſts in Britanny.

A letter from Nantz, dated May 24, contains the following intelligence:—"Yeſterday the Chouan chief, Cœur de Roi, (King's Heart) ſurrendered himſelf, with three of his principal officers; to day fourteen have come to deliver up their arms. There is not a day but ſome ſurrender, either here or in the environs. The famous Cœur de Lion, another chief, will ſurrender to-morrow with many others."

The following proclamation of General Scepeaux, commander in chief of the royaliſts in the vicinity of Nantzs, has lately been publiſhed:—

"Companions in arms! As long as we thought it poſſible to attain our deſired end, the free exerciſe of the religion of our fathers, and the eſtabliſhment of the legitimate heir of the French monarchy, we have not ceaſed to combat at your head, and to excite that courage and perſeverance which you have diſplayed to the eyes of all Europe; but at preſent, convinced that freſh efforts will only draw new misfortunes on our already-devaſtated country; informed that the moſt violent meaſures of terror would be exercciſed againſt our relations, who would be impriſoned, and their property entirely ravaged, we have not thought we ſhould continue a war which has become the ſcourge of the country we had hoped to defend; and did not think ourſelves permitted any longer to riſk the lives of thoſe brave men who had confided to us the charge of conducting them to the field of honor: however painful the ſacrifice may be to our opinion, we invite you to give up, into the hands propoſed for that purpoſe, the arms that we cannot any longer engage to preſerve, without becoming the executioners of your relations and friends. This clauſe fulfilled, your perſons and property will be under the ſafeguard of the laws; you will remain quiet at home; nor will you in any reſpect be troubled for the paſt. This aſſurance concerning your fate has alone induced us to conſent to a conduct, contrary to the wiſhes of our heart, but dictated by the neceſſity of the circumſtances.

Decreed the 15th May, 1796.

General in Chief.

PHILADELPHIA:
SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 13.

Extract of a letter from Havre-de-Grace, dated June 4th, 1796.

"It is aſtoniſhing that no advice has reached America yet of the ſudden fall with us of flour, rice and all other kinds of proviſions. Rice is now at 30 livres per cwt. without any demand, flour is unſaleable, as the beſt French freſh flour is offered at 24 livres per cwt. equal to 42 livres French. We ſee ſo many cargoes of flour arrive daily, that we are afraid of the immenſe loſſes which muſt unavoidably be the conſequence, as all the other markets in Europe are pretty much the ſame as ours."
